Big Jam in Lake Michigan the Cause of Boat's Sinking.

ALL ON BOARD ARE SAVED

Seventy of Crew and One Passenger Clamber Over Ice Hummocks to Shore, a Distance of Three Miles; Vessel and Cargo Valued at $200,000

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The steamer Iowa of the Goodrich Transit Company sank in Lake Michigan about three miles off the shore today after being crushed by what lake men declare was the heaviest ice jam seen in years off the Chicago harbor.

The crew, numbering 70, and the one passenger, clambered over the ice pack as the vessel settled and struggled over the hummocks to shore.

Some reached the government breakwater and were rescued by tugboats and others landed at different points. Those who reached safety first declared that no one had been lost.

The Iowa, built at Chicago, was a freighter, made of steel, and was loaded with lumber and other goods. The vessel, valued at $200,000, carried a miscellaneous cargo from $50,000 to $75,000 in value.

Officials of the company said it was fully insured.

On July 16, 1913, the Iowa was in collision in the Chicago river and sank after being tied up at her dock. She was raised and rebuilt, and was given an A-1 rating by government inspectors.

ONE ARREST IS MADE IN SMITHFIELD

Only one hearing was held by the burglar and that was some months ago. The population of Smithfield in 1910 was 749 persons.

SAVES LITTLE BROTHER FROM BEING WASHED INTO SEWER

North Scotland Youth Performs Heroic Deed During the Flood Along Jacobs Creek.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSDALE, Feb. 4.—That as he was about to be washed into a big sewer when the recovery of his body would have been almost impossible, Wolford Carlson, aged 6, raised his hand from the flood, at North Scotland, during the heavy water Tuesday.

Fortunately the boy had been seen by the child's brother, John Carlson, aged 14. At imminent risk of his life he had plunged into the water and rescued his little brother.

When the waters surrounded the home of Andrew Carlson, a prominent resident of North Scotland, who lives opposite the Ueber Tooling Company's plant, the little boy was in danger.

He had started for the chicken coop, but the high water and wind were all about the house. The elder boy started to hunt his little brother. He said afterward as he looked back, saw a hand sticking out of the water, and moving toward the roaring intake of the big sewer that runs over to Jacobs creek.

The older boy plunged in and managed to catch the little one by the feet, as the story is told and dragged him out. The little boy had swallowed a quantity of water and would have been dead in a short time even if he had escaped going into the sewer.

Residents of North Scotland think the boy should have a Carnegie medal for his bravery and promptness.

CAPTOR'S BULLET GOES WILD

T. H. Haven Loses His Prisoner When the Latter Takes a Long Chance at Getting Away; Had Been Tugging at West Side Home.

Surprising a white man in the act of robbing the refrigerator at his home on North Third street, West Side, early last night, Thomas H. Haven held the fellow up at the point of a gun. Then began a march to the police station, but at the alley south of the Haven residence, the prisoner broke away, shouting:

"Here, here's where I go; you can go ahead and shoot."

Then he dashed down the alley and disappeared in the darkness, followed by a shot from Mr. Haven's gun. Not caring to cause the man mortal injury, he fired low and the shot did not take effect.

The outcome at the Haven residence had been robbed several times recently. In an effort to detect the thief, burglar alarms were placed on the door of the out-house and also upon the refrigerator.

While sitting in the dining room reading last night, Mr. Haven heard the alarm bell ring and soon afterward the bell connected with the refrigerator rang. He went to the door and saw the out-house door ajar. Then he secured his gun and waited for the intruder to emerge.

When the man appeared, it was "hands up" for him. He submitted willingly enough, until he reached the alley when he dashed away to liberty.

JUMBO GOES TO JAIL

Men With the Big Feet Charged With Stealing.

Andy Trumpki, better known as "Jumbo," was taken to jail by Constable William Rohlf to await trial on a charge of stealing a quantity of copper trolley wire. Trumpki and another man were arrested by the constable last Thursday when he saw them carrying suspicious packages across the bridge. There was no evidence that the wire had been stolen, consequently the men were released. They contended that they had gotten it in West Virginia.

Since that time, however, evidence that the men had stolen the wire was secured, and Trumpki was arrested on the street yesterday. He was taken to prison in company with Albert McSweney, who is charged with carrying concealed weapons and pointing a gun.

Trumpki is called "Jumbo" on account of his tremendous feet. At one time he was committed to jail and it was necessary to get new shoes for him. Not a store in Uniontown had a size big enough for him and it was finally necessary to have a pair made to order.

It is said that the railroad officials are now studying the matter as it is getting the new station. It is not on record whether the board of trade sent a supplication heavenward, but the town still has the same old station.

POTTSVILLE COUNCIL FORCED TO NAME NEW COMMISSION

As Yet Connellsville Has Gotten Along Without City Planners, but Its Turn May Come.

Something which Connellsville city council has overlooked at present is now causing considerable interest in other third class cities of the state, and that is the city planning commission. Up in Pottsville, which became a city at the same time Connellsville did, the council was threatened with impeachment if it did not appoint such a commission, and to prevent such action the body named five men at a meeting this week. One C. F. Foley, a Socialist leader, started proceedings against the city for ignoring the law creating such a commission, claiming that it was intended as an excuse for excluding department to hold council in check in granting franchises or opening new streets.

The city planning commission is provided for in a supplement to the Clark third class city bill. It directs the appointment of five men, one for one, one for two, one for three, one for four and one for five years, to serve without compensation and make annual report to the city. They shall have jurisdiction over sewer extension, widening, narrowing, enlargement, ornamentation and parking of any street, boulevard, park, parkway, playground or other public ground. New buildings, additions to the city, sewer, water, gas, or gas-main improvement would come up for the approval of the commission.

BLUE TULLE AND CHARMEUSE.

Equally airy and dainty is this evening frock for which blue charmeuse has been used to add weight and substance to the daintiness of tulle. The main part of the blouse is made of the heavier material and gathered into a giraffe of the same. A noticeable feature of this frock is a distinctly normal waist-line. A very full and very wide tulle of delicate blue tulle hangs over an underskirt of the silk and is trimmed in straight bands of the same material in graduated widths. This design would be a very good one for the use of the home dressmaker.

Born of poor Jewish parents in Germany 61 years ago, he was brought to this country when 14 years old. The family settled at Chillicothe, Mo. Young Alexander was self-made from the start. He entered politics and became a councilman and later mayor of Chillicothe. He went to Bolivia in 1891 and started a chain of clothing stores, branching from Blackfoot, Minn. to Baker City, Ore. He was twice elected mayor of Bolivia. He was elected governor over Governor John M. Baines Republican, by about 7,000 plurality. He was nominated by the Democrats for governor in 1908, but was defeated, although running 7,000 votes ahead of the national ticket.

Why is POSTUM Replacing Coffee?

People are waking up to the harmful effects of the powerful drug—caffeine—in coffee, which poisons the system, often resulting in nervousness, heart flutter, headache, biliousness and many other ills and discomforts.

The pure food-drink, Postum, is absolutely drug-free—made only of the choicest wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses. It contains no caffeine or other harmful elements.

If in doubt that coffee hurts you, a sure test is to leave it off for 10 days and use Postum. It's an easy change, too, for Postum tastes much like the mild, high-grade Javas. As the coffee-drug is eliminated from your system, your own feelings will suggest Postum and better health.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum—soluble form, made in the cup with hot water instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious, and the cost per cup is about the same.

HOW TO GET RID OF DYSPEPSIA

Don't Rely on Medicine! Don't Go on Freak Diet! Common Sense and an Ant-Acid Usually All That Are Needed.

"If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching, distress after eating, heartburn or any other stomach trouble due to hyperacidity (the usual cause of stomach trouble) you must take no medicine to get upon the stomach. That is, you must not take any medicine to cure the trouble. You should not half starve yourself by going without the nutritious food that you need to rebuild weak tissues. Some foods are not good for people when in perfect health—very rich, sweet, highly seasoned dishes. Avoid these, but eat fairly substantial, plain foods. Eat slowly. Every time you drink anything but water you should not drink with meals. Drink before and after eating. Do not take pills or other artificial stimulants. If you follow the foregoing simple instructions it is probable that you will not need any medicine at all except if you want to call it medicine. A little antacid after meals. The best antacid is ordinary bicarbonate of soda which can be purchased at any drug store. It is not to be used upon the stomach but on the contents of the stomach. The antacid as you can learn by consulting your dictionary or encyclopedia is merely to neutralize or counteract the excess acid so the stomach can digest the food normally. Take a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in a little cold or hot water after each meal. You should not immediately eat again. If your case is severe. Careful, moderate eating and the use of bicarbonate of soda should put your stomach in normal condition in a short time. If you have not allowed dyspepsia to advance to the extreme stage of developing stomach ulcers—Adv.

ITCHING NEARLY DROVE A WHOLE FAMILY CRAZY

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24, 1914—My husband had a rash all over his body and the whole family was in the same condition. It looked scaly and raised up on the arms and body in big lumps. This trouble burned and itched so that it would nearly drive a whole family crazy. It was always at night, so we could not sleep. We all had this trouble for about two or three years, and during that time tried many remedies and prescriptions with no results. We tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and it RIDDED AT ONCE, and before the third jar of ointment had been used, we were all completely cured. It has been four months since we were cured and there are no traces of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. S. A. Clarkson, 1520 Latta Ave.

Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and physicians have prescribed them for 20 years in the treatment of skin troubles.

DON'T FEEL RIGHT? HEADACHY, BILIOUS, CONSTIPATED, STOMACH BAD?—DIME A BOX

You men and women who can't get and sweetened the stomach, remove the feeling right—who have headache, your undigested and fermenting and coated tongue, foul taste, and foul foul gases take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. A Cassen's tonics straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box keeps your head clear, stomach sweet, liver pills, castor oil and other harsh irritants? Cassen's immediately cleanses for months. Don't forget the children.

Russians Pressing Into East Prussia.

The announcement by the Russian general staff that a new Russian army of invasion in East Prussia has reached Pogosen a few miles north of the important city of Tilsit is a surprising development of the operations in Eastern Europe. Russian armies are now converging on Insterburg, which commands the main railway lines to Königsberg, and Danzig in a fan-shaped formation. From the north the new army is advancing north of Tilsit. From the northwest the right wing of the original army of invasion has reached the Inster river and is reported to have passed it in one place. This force is reported to have captured Pilsken. From the east the Russians are moving in the Gumbinnen region. From the southeast they are advancing near Darkehmen. Still further south their left wing is guarded by troops operating among the Mazurian lakes at Lotzen. The arrows indicate the location and direction of these invading forces.

HOME RULE AND PUBLIC UTILITIES.

An association of borough officials with some third class city representatives attached have formed a league for the repeal of the law creating the Public Service Commission. The aim of this movement does not fully appear. The ground upon which the abolition of the commission is asked is that it interferes with home rule. It is argued that it takes away from boroughs the sacred right of franchising, abolishes municipal regulation of public service corporations and deprives the local authorities of the dear privilege of cutting the corporations on the carpet occasionally. The real reason, however, seems to be of a political nature. It is charged in some quarters that the Public Service Commission was created chiefly for the benefit of the corporation and incidentally for the promotion of the power of the Republican organization. These can entions are absurd.

The Public Service Commission was created in response to a Progressive demand for putting in practice the conservation of our natural resources. It is charged that the conservation of our natural resources should extend to the conservation of our public utilities, which is to say that reasonable rates and proper service should be insured to the public through the medium of government regulation, supplanting the old plan of cutthroat competition while it lasted, and monopoly after the survival of the fittest had given decent interim to the remains of the competition. The central idea is to have the greatest measure of efficiency and economy in which the public shall fully share. The plan is not new. It is in successful operation in a number of states. In Pennsylvania, the commission has been in existence less than two years. It is proposed to abolish it before it has been tried.

Neither persons, the history and absurd action will have to be produced. The Pittsburgh Gazette Times, discussing this point, says "If it shall appear, after proper hearing and disclosure of conditions, that the boroughs of the state and the people living in them are deprived of the means to deal with the public service companies serving their communities, it ought not to be impractical to modify the act so as to render it more responsive to the necessities of the situation. The measure covers many subjects and takes a wide range, and it would be fortuitous if it contained no defects whatever. Not to sweep the whole law aside and return to chaotic conditions as of yore is not to be thought of. The commission has not been in operation 18 months. Much of its work necessarily has been preliminary and formative, though it has paved up a number of exceedingly important cases involving controversies of intense public interest as well as touching the life of the community. There has been neither the time nor the opportunity, however, to prove up the whole power of the law or the capacity of a commission to enforce it with substantial satisfaction to the people on one side and the corporations concerned on the other. The law ought not to be condemned on account of the personnel of the commission and the commission ought not to be condemned for the limitations or reversities of the law. Let them both have a chance to demonstrate their usefulness. The main problem to be solved by this legislation is too large and too important to be left to the public for any venture into hasty repeal or reckless amendment."

The Municipal Home rulers are either too simple, too speculative or too sinister. Unless supported by more convincing reasons, their legislative propositions are not entitled to serious consideration.

Conservation is the burden of Governor Hittell's message to the West Virginia Legislature, and if it be true that 500,000,000 feet of perfectly good natural gas is going to waste every day we think it high time something was being done. We buy our natural gas from West Virginia, and we are beginning to suspect that we are helping to pay for that which is wasted.

It is hard for the Republican county officers to make both ends meet in these Democratic times.

Among the Pennsylvania Blue Laws is one that the weight of a loaf of bread at six ounces, and it is proposed to repeal the law. While in the business, the Legislature had better repeal all the Blue Laws. They have become mere vehicles for injustice and oppression.

Life in the Trenches

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Hissash."

As the present war goes on the window of the American republic in standing its great rebellion in the midst of the southern states becomes increasingly apparent.

During the great winter months of European soldiers have been living in trenches far from the comforts even of an American street in midwinter—for an American street is usually well drained, while the trenches fill with water which then freezes, making it necessary to chop the snow out in the morning at great labor and expense.

Winter in western Europe consists of blizzards and thaws and mud and ice in equal parts. After a private soldier has lain for a few days in a trench paved with six inches of mud, frozen feet come almost as a relief.

In the trenches one does not have a chance to bathe or to wash or to sleep with any persistency, or drink hot lemonade for incipient pneumonia. It is impossible to waste any time keeping warm because the entire business of war is to make it warm for the enemy.

We cannot help thinking that if the British, the French, the Belgians, the Dutch and the Danes were to be compelled to legislate in trenches with chilblains at their feet, a ghastly, empty sensation half way up and unlimited sharpness just overheard, fresh new and very intelligent ideas regarding peace might be evolved within a few days.

They say that when the soldiers have lived in a trench for a few weeks they make it very comfortable by draining it, digging deep caves and installing baths and stoves and a card table. However, patriotism demands that just as a trench becomes sufficiently comfortable to keep a huge in without arousing the humane society, its occupants must also be charged forward 1,000 yards, driving the enemy before them and lying down triumphantly once more in the mud and snow.

Trench life is wasted in Europe, particularly upon the English who have already learned how to live happily in unheated houses at a temperature of 40 with fog trimmings, and it would be a great education and help to millions of Americans.

After an American soldier has survived a campaign in a trench he would look upon the modern street car with a new fondness and would be able to hang onto the roof during the rush hours in January or stand on the slush covered floor in perfect comfort. He might even be able to live in a city flat building operated by a janitor's union without murmur or complaint.

FLORIDA

THE GREATEST MONEY-MAKING FARM.

MANATEE COUNTY, THE VERY HEART OF THE STATE

Nowhere else can the farmer enjoy such unbounded prosperity. Nowhere else is there such delightful, health-giving and crop-growing climate. Nowhere else can you find such a magnitude of wealth-giving soil.

Farmers in Manatee County are right now producing as high as $500.00 per acre, and the planting, cultivating, harvesting, shipping and living expenses are all incomparably low.

Hundreds of Northern men have gone to Florida as skeptics, but these same men have had their eyes opened to wealth-producing facts that were amazing, and the result is Manatee County Farms are now owned and cultivated by Northern men who are harvesting riches every year.

Manatee Farms are now selling at $50.00 per acre (in ten acre tracts) on payments of $10.00 down and $10.00 monthly, but with the rapidly increasing demand the price is bound to leap upwards within a very short time.

Remember this—Manatee County Farms right now are shipping to this very Pennsylvania district, oranges, strawberries, grape fruit and vegetables at the highest cash prices.

MANUFACTURER NO. 1 SAYS:—"After I sell the dealer it's up to him to sell the goods. They are his not mine."

MANUFACTURER NO. 2 SAYS:—"The more I can help the dealer sell my goods the more he will buy from me."

This latter clasp follows his sale to the dealers with newspaper advertising in their cities.

He believes in keeping his goods moving.

Naturally the local dealers work with him. They push these newspaper advertised goods because they are easier to sell.

It is not very hard to figure out which of these two types of manufacturers is going to make the most money in the long run.

Manufacturers anxious to get dealer co-operation are invited to address the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Temple of Friendship.

"I CAME over to ask Mrs. Chichester's permission for you two young ladies to go to a dance to-night. It's just across from here at the Assembly room," said Jerry. Peg beamed joyfully. It was just what she wanted to do. Ethel viewed the suggestion differently. "It's very kind of you," she said, "but it's quite impossible."

"Oh!" ejaculated Peg. "Impossible?" ejaculated Jerry. "I'm sorry," and Ethel went to the door. "So am I," replied Jerry regretfully. "I would have given you longer notice only it was made up on the spur of the moment. Don't you think you could?" "I don't care for dancing. Besides, my head aches."

"What a pity!" exclaimed the disappointed young man. Then he said eagerly, "Do you suppose your mother would allow Miss Margaret to go?" "I'll ask her," and Ethel left the room.

Peg ran across, stopped the door from closing and called after Ethel. "I didn't mean to hurt you—indeed I didn't. I wanted to talk to you—that was all—my mother made me say it. Ethel disappeared without even turning her head."

Peg came into the room ruefully and sat down on the sofa. She was thoroughly unhappy. Jerry looked at her a moment, walked over to her and asked her, "What's the matter?"

"One of us girls has been brought up all wrong. I tried to make friends with her just now and only made her angry, as I do every one in this house whenever I open my mouth."

"Aren't you friends?" "Indeed—indeed—indeed—we're not. None of them are with me."

"What a shame!" "Wait until you hear what me aunt says when you ask her about the dance!"

"Don't you think she'll let you go?" "No, I do not." She looked at him quizzically for a moment. Then she burst out laughing.

"Mother Jerry, will you take me all the same if me aunt doesn't consent?" "Why, Peg?" he began astonishedly. "But I haven't got an evening's dress. Does it matter?"

"Not in the least, but—" "I'll think of one," she said. "It's very charitable; still—" "Stains and all?"

"My dear Peg—" "Perhaps they'll rub out. It's the prettiest one me aunt gave me, and I put it on tonight—because I thought you—that is, some one might come here tonight. At least I hoped he would, and you've come!"

"Oh, you must take me! You must! I haven't had a bit of pleasure since I've been here. It will be wonderful. Besides, I would not rest all night with you dancing over there and me a prisoner over here."

"Now, Peg—" he tried to begin. "I've no use, I tell you. You've got to take me. Are you ashamed of me because I'm ignorant? Are you?"

"Not a bit," replied Jerry heartily. "I was just the same at your age. I used to scamp at school and shirk at college until I found myself so far behind fellows I despised that I was ashamed. Then I went after them tooth and nail until I caught them up and passed them."

"Did you?" cried Peg eagerly. "I will, too," she said. "Will you?"

She nodded vigorously. "I will—indeed I will. From now on I'll do everything they tell me and learn everything they teach me if it kills me!"

"I wish you would," he said seriously. "An' when I pass everybody else an' know more than any one else know—will you be very proud of me?"

"Yes, Peg. Even more than I am now."

"Are you now?" "I am proud to think you are my friend."

"You'd be won't you wager. We are friends, aren't we?" "I am yours."

"Sure I'm yours all right." She looked at him, laughed shyly and pressed her cheeks. He was watching her closely.

"What are you laughing at?" he asked. "Do you know what Tom Moore wrote about friendship?"

"No. Tell me." Peg sat at the piano and played very softly the prelude to an old Irish song. Jerry said surprisedly, "Oh, so you play?"

"Hardly that," And Jerry laughed again. "This is called 'A Temple to Friendship,'" she explained.

"Indeed?" "An' it's about a girl who built a shrine an' who thought she wanted to put Friendship into it. She thought she wanted Friendship. After awhile she found out her mistake. Listen."

And Peg sang, in a pure, tremulous little voice that vibrated with feeling, the following:

"A temple to Friendship," said Laura enchanted. "I'll build in this garden the temple is divine!"

Her temple was built, and she now only wanted an image of Friendship to place on the shrine.

She flew to a sculptor, who set down before her a Friendship, the fairest his art could invent.

But so cold and so dull that the youthful adorer saw plainly this was not the idol she meant.

"Oh, never," she cried, "could I think of enshrining an image whose looks are so joyless and dim."

But you little god (Cupid) upon roses reclining. "Well make, if you please, also, a Friendship of him."

So the bargain was struck; with the little god laden she joyfully flew to her shrine in the grove.

"Farewell," said the sculptor; "you're not the first maiden who came but for Friendship and took away—Love."

She played the refrain softly after she had finished the song. Gradually the last note died away.

Jerry looked at her in amazement. "Where in the world did you learn that?"

"My father taught it to me," replied Ethel.

"He turned and saw Peg deliberately pointing to the pathway and indicating that he was to meet her there."

Peg, left alone, hurried over to the windows and looked out into the night. The moonlight was streaming full down the path through the trees.

In a few moments Peg went to the foot of the stairs and listened. Not hearing anything, she crept upstairs into her own little chamber.

She found a door ajar and a light gleamed from under the door. She opened the door and looked into the room. She walked straight to the staircase without looking at Peg and began to mount the stairs.

"Hello, Ethel!" called out Peg, all remembrance of the violent discussion gone in the excitement of the present.

"I'm studying for an hour. Are you still angry with me? Won't you say 'Good night' to me, then. I'll say 'Good night' to you, an' God bless you."

Peg's little heart beat excitedly. The one thought that beat through her quick brain was:

"Will Jerry come back for me?"

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Dance and Its Sequel.

JERRY met Peg at the foot of the path when he saw all the lights disappear in the house.

They walked across the lawn and meadows on that beautiful July night, with the moon shining down on them.

Once at the great hall his mother put the gauche little Peg at her elbow, introduced her to the most charming of partners and saw that everything was done to minister to her enjoyment.

It was a wonderful night for Peg. She danced every dance, she had the supper one with Jerry, she laughed and sang and romped and was the center of all the attention. What might have appeared boldness in another with Peg was just her innocent, willful, childlike nature. She made a wonderful impression that night and became a general favorite. She wanted to go on and on and never to stop. When the last waltz was played and ended and the ball was really ended, Peg felt a pang of regret such as she had not felt for a long, long time.

"Oh, I am so happy, so happy!" she cried as Jerry led her back to her seat at the conclusion of the last dance.

"I wish I could make the world one great ballroom for you," said Jerry earnestly.

"Do you?" asked Peg tremulously. "I do."

"With you as my partner, dancing every dance with me?"

"Every one."

"Wouldn't that be beautiful? An' no creeping back after it all like a thief in the night?"

"No," replied Jerry. "Your own mistress, free to do whatever you wished."

"Oh," she cried impulsively, "wouldn't that be wonderful?"

"Is mother had come across to say 'Good night' to Peg. In a few moments his sisters joined them. They all pressed invitations on Peg to call them at Noel's folly and, with Mrs. Chichester's permission, to stay some days.

Back across the meadows and through the lanes, under that marvelous moon and with the wild beat of the "Continental Waltz" echoing from the ballroom, walked Peg and Jerry, side by side, in silence. After a little while Peg whispered:

"Jerry, what were you going to say to me when your mother came up to us?"

"Something it would be better to say in the daylight, Peg."

"Sure, why the daylight? Look at the moon so high in the heavens."

"Wait until tomorrow."

"I'll not sleep a wink thinking of all the wonderful things that happened this night. Tell me—Jerry—your mother and your sister—they weren't ashamed of me, were they?"

"Why, of course not. They were charmed with you."

"Shall I ever see them again?" "I hope some day you'll see a great deal of them."

"They reached the windows leading into the living room."

"Good night, Peg," he said. "What a hurry you are in to get rid of me! An' a night like this may never come again."

Suddenly a quick flash of jealousy started through her.

"Are you going back to the dance? Are you going to dance the extra ones you wouldn't take me back for?"

"Not if you don't wish me to."

"Please don't," she pleaded earnestly. "I wouldn't rest if I thought of you with your arm around one of those two ladies' waists as it was around mine such a little while ago—an' me all alone here. You won't, will you?"

"No, Peg, I will not."

He bent down and kissed her hand reverently.

At the same moment the sound of a high power automobile was heard in the near distance.

"Take care," cried Jerry. "Go in. Some one is coming."

Peg hurried in and hid just inside the windows and heard every word that followed.

As Peg disappeared Jerry walked down the path to meet the visitor. He came face to face with Christian Brent.

"Hello, Brent," he said in surprise. "What in the world—" cried that astonished gentleman.

"This house is quiet," said Jerry, exclaiming.

"So I see," and Brent glanced up at the darkened windows. Jerry remarked:

"Just coming from the dance? I didn't see you there."

"No," replied the uncomfortable Brent. "I was restless and still stroiled here."

"Oh! Let us go on to the road."

"Right," said the other man, and they walked on.

Before they had gone a few steps Jerry stopped abruptly. Right in front of him at the gate was a forty horsepower automobile.

"Strolled here? Why, you have your car!" said Jerry.

"Yes," replied Brent hurriedly. "It's a bright night for a spin."

The two men went on out of hearing. Peg, crept softly upstairs. Just as she reached the top Ethel appeared from behind the curtains on her way down to the room. She was fully dressed and carried a small traveling bag.

Peg looked at her in amazement. "Ethel!" she said in a hoarse whisper.

"You?" cried Ethel under her breath and glaring at Peg furiously.

"Please don't tell any one you've seen me!" begged Peg.

"Go down into the room!" Ethel ordered.

Peg went down the stairs into the dark room. Ethel followed her.

"What are you doing here?" "I've been to the dance. Oh, you won't tell me aunt, will you? She'd send me away, an' I don't want to go now, indeed I don't."

FOR VALENTINE FROLICS.

Smart New Dance or Dinner Frook For the Pretty Maiden.

FRANKLIN, GILK, GOWS

For the St. Valentine's day party, whether it be dinner or dance, the charming frock here pictured will be found a very desirable gift. It is especially in pencilwork, a shade that harmonizes charmingly with the rose and lilac of youthful complexions. The material used is a soft, lustrous tulle. The surplice bodice is draped loosely over the shoulder and finished with an edging of cream flit lace. The skirt is one of the most up-to-date in line and cut; it has the smart hip yoke, gathered in this case, and skirt with the correct flare. The effect of the latter is heightened by the scalloped facing of black velvet around the hem. The wide girle is of black velvet ribbon.

ENAMELING A BEDSTEAD.

How to Do Over an Old One to the Best Advantage.

If you wish to enameel an iron bedstead first rub the enamel paint smooth with fine sandpaper. Do this gently, so as not to roughen what paint remains upon the iron. If you can get it all off it will be better, for then you will have a uniform surface. This done, go all over the bedstead with white enamel paint, which is sold at paint shops and by some druggists. Use a broad brush and sweep it smoothly and evenly over the iron until all is covered.

Let the first coat get perfectly dry before applying the second. Three coats may be necessary to make the white of the dark iron white. The advantage of a white enamel apart from the pleasing effect is that it may be renewed when it becomes defaced and that it will be the better for each renewal.

Workmanship Counts.

The best designs in smart jewelry are remarkably even more for exquisitely delicate workmanship than for the more size and quality of the gems. Quite inexpensive stones, such as amethysts, peridots, aquamarines and rock crystals, which are extremely fashionable, are set with as much care as if they were diamonds or pearls, emeralds or rubies "worth a king's ransom."

The newest earrings and pendants are light and fine as possible, little swinging chains weighted with a solitary stone or a cluster of tiny gems.

SMART FASHIONS.

The pointed corsege is promised for the near future.

In jewelry cut steel and cut jet are being combined.

Some of the new skirts are pleated around the edge.

Tailored costumes for street wear are suitably designed.

Counts for sports wear are almost invariably of the army order.

The skirts of children's party frocks are usually plaited or flounced.

Open and closed neckwear of lace and not is among the favorites.

A pretty cotton waist has the fullness shifted in around the waist.

Dotted Swiss is to be worn in the spring, and so is embroidered organdie.

A great many of the new hats suggest the headgear of European soldiers.

Skirts are made with a rather high waistband, which insures a perfect hang.

There is a growing popularity of the snake bracelet, necklace and even brooches.

Hardened.
